Domestic violence ends in murder

Pacific Grove grandmother dead; daughter's estranged boyfriend likely suspect

By Marge Ann Jameson

Responding to a call from a taxi driver about an unpaid fare, Pacific Grove Police found instead a grisly scene on Sunday, Nov. 21 at 10:45 p.m.

The cab driver told officers that he picked up a male subject in Seaside and delivered him to the residence at 214 17 Mile Drive. The subject told the cab driver to wait and went inside the residence. When he did not return, the cab driver thought the subject was not going to pay the fare so he called police.

Police knocked on the door, and though no one answered, they heard sounds inside so they went to a side window. Officers reported seeing what appeared to be blood spattered on the wall inside, so they forced entry.

Inside they found, deceased in the floor, Judith Salazar, 46, of Pacific Grove. She was the apparent victim of a stabbing.

Nearby on the floor was 26 year-old Sunny Nguyen, also suffering from knife wounds. Nguyen, of Seaside, was transported by AMR to an air ambulance and taken to a San Jose medical trauma center where he is being treated. He remains in police custody, the apparent suspect in the murder. As of press time, he had been arrested and there is no word on his condition though he is expected to recover. He will, when released by the San Jose trauma center, be transferred to the infirmary at Monterey County Jail.

Nguyen was allegedly the cab customer.

Two small children, an eight month-old boy and a two year-old girl, were found unharmed in the residence. Nguyen is reportedly the father of the two children, while the dead woman, Judith Salazar, is their grandmother. The mother

PG High School seeks a high: A Natural High

New club offers sports, substance, but not substances.

By Christelle Harris

At the Pacific Grove Unified School District's Nov. 19 meeting, a new club was announced known as Natural High. Natural High is new to Pacific Grove High. It is a drug-free club funded by the Sundt Memorial, an organization started by Jon Sundt in honor of his two brothers who both died due to drug-related problems. Pacific Grove's local branch was announced at the school board meeting by Marcia Waitt, a Stanford Psychology graduate, and Sean Keller a PGHS English Teacher.

Besides its fine selection of second-hand merchandise, the AFRP (Animal Friends Rescue Project) Treasure Shop has a contender for Christmas Tree of the Year. The ten-footer is mounted on a tall stand so it almost reaches the store's high ceiling. Frank Quilantang, a former Pebble Beach chief floral designer who now volunteers at the store, turned his considerable talents loose on decorating the tree. Further assistance came from a man who identifies himself as "Doc Halliday." The AFRP Treasure Shop is located at 156 Fountain Avenue at the corner of Central.

Toy drive under way

The annual Crime Prevention Officer's Association of Monterey County (CPOAMC) Toy Drive has begun. Last year, the Toy Drive provided more than 1,400 toys to children in need. Churches and community service agencies throughout Monterey County have identified the needy children and they will help Santa by wrapping all the new toys, so don't wrap your donations. The officers request unwrapped, new toys. The drive will last until Dec. 17.

The Pacific Grove Police Department is located at the corner of Pine and Forest Avenues in Pacific Grove. Drop-off sites also include Salinas PD, CHP, CSUMB PD, Sheriff's office, Seaside PD, Presidio of Monterey PD and Del Rey Oaks PD.

PG Dog Gone Turkey-Dog Report

Ain't Nothing but a Hound Dog

In the area of Laurel Ave. a hound escaped its yard. While it was on the lam, the hound came across a yellow lab and the lab's human. The human tried to prevent an interaction between the two canines and fell to the ground. No injuries were reported.

Maybe we should tie this alleged family member to the car and see how they like it.

Officer was dispatched to the Wood St. area for a report about a dog tied to the bumper of a car (yes, really) When the officer arrived the German shepherd was in fact tied to the bumper. The dog was barking (wouldn't you be) and pulling on the rope. The officer went to the front door and no one was home. For safety reason the officer took the dog and held it. The owner called later that day and stated that they did not leave the dog tied to the bumper that it must have been a family member who had done it. The officer advised the human that if the dog was found tied that way again, the dog would be impounded and the human would be cited.

Rings Wallets and Things

A wallet was turned in that was found in the Country Club Gate area, a Bluetooth ear piece was found on the corner of Pine and Congress Ave. A found cell phone, a found insurance card and a report of a lost phone and Ipod were all reported this week.

$800.00 Sunglass? I think I wouldn't leave them in my car.

A person called in to report that an unknown person ransacked his unlocked vehicle and stole his $800.00 RX sunglasses. No suspect at this time. (I don't know what's wrong with this picture.)

Out to Lunch

Officer was dispatched to the Country Club Gate Shopping center were a burglary had occurred during the day. No force was used to gain entry and entry was made while employees were "out to lunch", various personal items were taken no suspect leads at this time. Stolen credit card was used at a gas station after theft.

Pair gets jail time for elder abuse, identity theft and burglary

Amanda Spears, 22, of Pacific Grove, and Theodore Alexander Lopez, 22, of Pebble Beach were placed on felony probation and ordered to serve 340 days and 240 days, respectively, in Monterey County jail.

Spears had entered a plea to felony charges of elder abuse, possession of stolen property, burglary and misdemeanor theft charges after she stole personal identification information from an elderly victim. Officials said the information was used to open credit card accounts and gain access to the victim's financial accounts.

Detectives said Spears also forged and unlawfully cashed checks from the Robert H. Down Parent Association.

Lopez, officials said, conspired with Spears to use the victim's identification to open and use credit cards.

Spears and Lopez purchased home electronics, video games, DVD movies and other items with the stolen funds.

in the care of Monterey County Family and Children Services pending initial stages of the investigation, but have since been released to their mother.

Pacific Grove Police Chief Darius Engles said that police detectives continue to attempt to piece together what led to the stabbing and to determine a motive.

"We have obviously received numerous statements. Motive is a critical piece of the investigation," he said, and he would not speculate further on a possible motive in the crime.

Salazar was a special education teacher at Alisal High School in Salinas, where grief counseling was being provided to faculty and students.

Thanksgiving at Gatsby's House

By George Laiolo

PGHS Young Writers' Club

Young Writers' Corner

It was the holiday season, and to celebrate, Jay Gatsby decided to hold a lavish Thanksgiving dinner party at his not-so-humble abode to impress some of his fellow literary figures and of course, Daisy. The characters on the guest list didn't often have such occasions to speak to each other, so the conversation at the event was hearty. Discussions regarding who was indeed the most memorable literary character, who hailed from the most significant literary classic, and who has since garnished the most hits on SparkNotes brought about some colorful exchanges in the halls of Gatsby's Hotel de Ville. At one point Jay recalled a recent summer excursion to Bermuda, an ideal vacation locale for relaxation. His trip, however, proved far from relaxing, for Captain Ahab had poured back a few too many Ole' Fashions and mistook a plump Siddhartha meditating poolside and munching on grapes for Moby Dick. Island security tried to hold Ahab back, but unfortunately for the tranquil enlightened one, Ahab never goes anywhere without his trusty harpoon.

Gatsby knew the risks of bringing together such array of characters, but he felt that the positivity of the holiday spirit would promote a pleasant get together between esteemed acquaintances. He sent out invitations the day after Halloween, and nearly every guest quickly RSVP'd, with the exception, of course, of the Invisible Man who was always missing!

When the day arrived, guests poured into the dining hall. Atticus Finch brought with him his two children, and a fine 1914 cabernet. Hester Prynne arrived alone. She had recently finalized her divorce with Roger Chillingworth, which should have made her exponentially more cheerful than she usually was, but that rigid Puritan ideology stood very strongly in Hester's demeanor and was reflected in her typical all black attire. The Widow Douglas, Huck Finn, and Tom Sawyer arrived next. The Widow kissed Gatsby on the cheek, for the two had become great friends after a recent steamboat trip down the Mississippi. Tom and Huck ran off to play with Jem and Scout, and the last few guests came through the mansion doorway. There was Captain Ahab, who had just spent a year in jail for the aggravated assault and drunk and disorderly conduct charges stemming from the Siddhartha incident (he was not awarded early release for good behavior). Then there was little Ralph and little Jack, who thankfully had patched things up after a good four months of counseling, though it was apparent that their other friend, Piggy, came to the mansion only for the turkey. Finally, there came Holden Caulfield, still donning his odd red cap. At first glance, he seemed elated, but Gatsby knew that Holden was busy scrutinizing his mansion; contemplating which parts of it he found phony and hypocritical.

The adults helped themselves to drinks and hors d'oeuvres while the children settled at a small table in the living room. As the beautifully prepared turkey made its entrance on an ornate silver platter carried by a servant, Hester quickly volunteered to say grace. The party bowed their heads in silence as the sweet savory scent of turkey wafted past their noses and Hester's prayer welcomed the meal.

"May God, our holy father, for this one meal, turn a blind eye to all the darkness, evil, iniquity, and moral ineptitude that permeate the earth; and may he ensure that the food doth not carry any sickening pestilence that might disembowel those at this table unfortunate enough to face the Lord's holy wrath."

Hester's prayer evoked somber "amens" from the Widow Douglas, and the always polite Atticus Finch, but Holden Caulfield could not suppress his urge to giggle at her zealous words.

"Gee Miss, great job getting us all in the mood to eat. That speech 'd surely take first prize in a happiness contest."

"What do yee know about happiness, ye whiny brat?" Interjected Captain Ahab, who had already knocked back a few too many. "I thought thee prayer was beautiful, Miss Prynne."

"Beautiful? Ahab you wouldn't know beautiful if it broadsided your damn boat!" Holden fired back.

"And yee would, Mr. anti-society? Ye can't possibly have time to recognize beauty when you spend so much time whalin' and moanin' about your problems."

"Speaking of whalin', how'd that work out for you, Captain?"

"Gentlemen, please, that's enough." Atticus Finch sought to keep the peace at the dinner table. "Mr. Caulfield, why don't you go check on the children? I believe I heard something in the living room."

"Aye Caulfield, why don't yee go be with the kiddies. Maybe ye can catch 'em while they're still in the rye, eh?"

Holden sprung out of his chair as if he was ready for a fight, but he remembered that the drunken Ahab's spear was probably somewhere nearby, and didn't wish to end up like poor Siddhartha. Besides, fighting was for wannabies and phonies anyway. He left the dining table to check on the children as Atticus, an always respectable figure, had requested. As he entered the living room, he noticed immediately that the children were nowhere to be found.

"Nooooo!!! Stop it guys that's not funny!" Piggy's high-pitched voice could be heard outside on the patio. "Let me have it, let me have it!"

"Lardo! Lardo! Piggy wants his turkey leg doesn't he?" Taunted Ralph and Jack. "Lardo! Lardo!"

Holden found it both very immature and a little bit funny that Ralph and Jack were playing keep-away with Piggy's dinner. He was also curious as to why Jem, Scout, Tom, and Huck were missing from the patio.

Piggy moaned "Why don't things ever change? We were rescued weren't we? You guys don't need to be mean anymore!"

Holden decided to intervene. He intercepted the turkey leg and brought it to Piggy but kept it just out of his reach. "I'll give you this if you tell me where the other young'ns went."

Ralph interrupted "Young'ns? You're only a few years older than we are!"

"Yeah!" said Jack. "And we're way more mentally stable!"

"Alright fine, here's your damn turkey leg." Holden conceded and walked in the other direction of the boys from the patio. In the distance he overheard a smooth jazz record playing. He approached the outdoor lounge where the sound came from and saw something that he knew would infuriate Atticus and the Widow Douglas. Tom Sawyer and Huck Finn, always the trouble-makers, decided to introduce the Finch's to the peaceful pleasure of a corn-cob pipe. Jem and Scout sat red-eyed and coughing while Tom and Huck looked dumbfounded at the music coming out of a mysterious contraption that neither of them had ever seen before. The children's good time was interrupted by a pestering knock on the window.

"Is it him again?" a vexed Jem asked.

"Looks like it, he's got that weird scar on his forehead." Scout responded.

Tom and Huck made silly faces at the boy knocking on the window who merely wanted to come join the party. They also caught the attention of Ralph and Jack, who were sneaking up behind the boy. They gave the malevolent pair the thumbs up, and the hapless boy with the scar on his forehead experienced the most painful wedgie that was humanly possible.

Jack sneered "Got any spells to get yourself out of a wedgie, Potter?"

Harry implored "I just want to be loved!"

Gatsby had come outside to quell the shouting when he noticed the severely wedgied Harry Potter hobbling towards his doorstep.

"I'm sorry Harry, but we've been over this. You're not welcome here. Please leave my mansion."

It was at this moment that Gatsby decided this would be his first and last Thanksgiving Party. The Finch's were smoking, Piggy was being bullied again, Ahab and Holden were on the verge of mortal combat, and Harry Potter, who really wanted nothing more than to fit in, had once again crashed Gatsby's mansion. It seemed that not even a nice Thanksgiving dinner could postpone egotism and a bitter clash of personalities. One by one the guests began making their way out of the Gatsby mansion. Atticus and the Widow Douglas shuffled their miscreants out the door, and Ralph, Piggy, and Jack, followed behind. Holden bid farewell to his host, and he was about to leave when he recalled that he had hung his hat up in the closet in the entry hall. He opened the doors and, to his and Gatsby's utter shock, found Captain Ahab and Hester Prynne, both completely naked, sprawled passionately on the floor together. Apparently, the Puritan and the drunkard were the only guests who truly felt the holiday spirit.

Open Enrollment Act updates from Board

By Christelle Harris

Remember the “Romero Bill?” It is the bill which has now been given the official name “Open Enrollment Act.” It allows students from lower achieving schools to transfer to higher achieving ones. Pacific Grove is a rare school district, because it does not get its money based on attendance, but from property tax values. This essentially means that if a student transfers to Pacific Grove Unified School District, their attendance is in jeopardy of not being funded. Funding, as we all know, is essential to school performance and well being. Pacific Grove Unified School District revised their board policy 5117.1 once again at this week’s school board meeting, allowing for more consideration of the fiscal impact of this bill on the PGUSD. Ralph Porras, Superintendent announced, and the revision was approved unanimously.

The new policy (as quoted from the PGUSD school board 11/18/2010 packet) provides:

1. Additional definitions from the Open Enrollment Act, language stating the District’s obligation to notify any District students attending a District “open enrollment” school that they have the right to a transfer,

2. Information about the “aggregated method” for receiving and reviewing Romero Bill transfer applications during the maximum 60-day period from receipt of application to parent notification later,”

3. Added language permitting the District to deny a transfer based on the student’s discipline history, including two suggested bases for such denials,

4. An added provision reflecting language in the pending regulations which states that a District “may allow a pupil who has transferred to and is currently enrolled in a school in the district . . . to matriculate to a middle or high school in the district without having to reapply” regardless of whether the school the student would have matriculated to in the district of residence is on the list of 1,000 Open Enrollment schools

5. Minor changes that streamline and clarify the BP, based on additional information received in the months since the Romero Bill first went into effect.”

At the bottom of the revision, there was also a fiscal impact clause that stated “If implemented as proposed, the policy will explicitly not allow the approval of any interdistrict enrollment agreements to occur that would create any adverse fiscal impact on the district.”

The right of the district to deny a student based on disciplinary history, the sixty day waiting period to allow for “consideration” and the fiscal impact statement may make it much harder for even the best students to transfer into Pacific Grove. Fortunately, we know that our school district is in high demand, and that is a great honor.

substance abuse through adventure sports such as rock climbing, kayaking, hiking, cycling, skateboarding and surfing. The teens in the club start by watching one of the Natural High videos chock full of famous icons like skateboarder Tony Hawk, musician MYA and Surfer Laird Hamilton explaining their own drug-free lifestyles.

“It is a club meant to attract the kids who are already partying, whereas the other programs we have in place attract the kids who would never do drugs in the first place.” says Sean Keller. The club replaces the rush of drugs and alcohol with adrenaline, and shows how effective it can be. As the Natural High website www.naturalhigh.com puts it, “Numerous studies have shown that lectures and scare tactic approaches are not only ineffective, but make kids more aware of drugs and curious to try them. If you show kids their drug-free heroes in music, sports, dance, and the arts, students will strive to be drug-free like them.” This club not only promotes being drug-free to students, but sets up a foundation for a drug free lifestyle. As one school board member put it “It promotes a drug free lifestyle, because abusing substances would ruin their ability to do these sports.”

Marcia Waitt wrote the latest curriculum, Natural High Four, for the club, and is piloting the program here in Pacific Grove. She is using the local club as a national prototype, and although she says it is in its early stages, Pacific Grove could set the precedent for clubs all over the country. “It is in its early stages at Pacific Grove High,” says Marcia “All the English students have seen the Natural High Four video, and have responded with personal essays relating to their experiences with drugs and alcohol.”

According to Waitt, it is a tiered process in which the students watch the video, do projects, write essays and finally participate in activities, like hikes and climbing trips. Just this last Sunday the Pacific Grove Natural High Club hosted a hike in Big Sur. Sean Keller said, “We need to keep the relationship going with these kids, from kindergarten all the way through high school.” Most importantly, Sean says “We can’t pass drug use off as a rite of passage anymore. I want all the parents in on this, even the ones who allow their kids to party. Because it’s going to take a village.”

But this club can’t exist at Pacific Grove High without financial backing from the community. Thus far, the school district has not allocated funds to the program, and there has been no formal request made to become a program funded by the district instead of an independent club. This may be strategic, because as a club Natural High has more room to collect donations from parents and supporters. Part of the task of the young participants of this club is to take donations, and sell the Natural High T-shirts. Marcia Waitt has asked that anyone considering helping the program grow in Pacific Grove donate to a student in the club, or purchase a T-shirt. Until then, “We are pleading with the school board to please take us on,” said Keller. For more information e-mail Marcia at marcia@naturalhigh.com, or Sean at skeller@pgusd.org.

Pacific Grove High School Breakers who made it to Sections in the cross country competition at Toro Park were: (L-R) Alex Schramm, Katie Nuss, Natalie Chambers, Stella Park, Kaitlin Alt, Becky Long, Isabella Fenstermaker, Mary Modisette. Photo by Skyler Lewis.

The Pacific Grove High School girls cross country team qualified as a team for the first time in five years, competing in the Central Coast Section championship at Toro Park after placing second in Mission Trail Athletic League the previous week. They placed second in MTAL, only two points behind winners Stevenson. And they finished ahead of Carmel.

There were 91 runners in the CCS Championship, running three miles. Breaker girls finished 10th of the 13 teams. Individual finishers were: Isabella Fenstermaker 24th in 21:05, Kaitlin Alt, 40th in 21:52; Stella Park, 49th in 22:36; Becky Long, 63rd in 23:15; Natalie Chambers, 69th in 23:37; Mary Modisette 76th in 23:56.

While the team didn't qualify, two Breaker boys qualified, Alex Schramm and Addison Miller. Miller came down with the flu, however, and was unable to compete in the CCS Championship. Schramm finished 49th of 105 with a time of 18:00 for the three miles.

"The top five girls are all returning next year, so the team should be even better next season," said Coach Steve Watkins.

California Aviator flies biplane from naval ship

Eugene Ely has set a new standard in aviation. While the U. S. Navy researched ideas for new ways to make war, Ely used a naval cruiser, the U.S.S. Birmingham, as a landing strip ... the first time this has been done. Soon afterward, the aviator was honored by being given the rank of lieutenant in the California National Guard.

Ely flew a Curtiss Golden Flyer, designed by Glenn Curtiss in 1909. The plane is of the type that locates the propeller behind the pilot. Not only does the Curtiss represent new technology, Ely is but the 17th pilot licensed by the federal government.

Behind U. S. Navy involvement in the test flight was Assistant Secretary of the Navy Beekman Winthrop. To depart the Birmingham, Winthrop ordered sailors to construct a wooden ramp, 83 feet long, higher at one end than at the other. On November 14, the plane was lifted to the high end, Ely climbed in, and momentum was gained rolling down the ramp. Not quite enough head-speed was obtained to prevent the plane's wheels from dipping into the ocean, but the day was saved by the roaring engine. After the brief flight, Ely did not attempt to re-land on the cruiser. Instead, he set his plane down on the hard sand of a nearby shoreline. Ely said that he was relieved to be again on land; he does not know how to swim.

Ely is now on the way to San Francisco for a second trial flight. The navy ship, to be anchored in San Francisco Bay, is the U. S. S. Pennsylvania. The same sort of wooden "flight deck" will be constructed and, this time, Ely intends to land on the ship as well as take off from it.

All Grovians are wishing Ely well. *

Governor Folk is in Grove

Governor Joseph Folk arrived in the Grove by train this week. He spent the greater part of his time after arrival in viewing the beauties of this vicinity. He was taken by auto mobil to Pebble Beach where he took lunch. He was then escorted around the marvelous beauties of the Pacific Improvement Company's forest reservation.

Folk was accompanied by his friend John Butler of Cincinnati, Superior Court Judge B. V. Sargent of Salinas, Reb. Dr. W. C. Evans (President of the Pacific Grove Chautauqua), Rev. Dr. Thomas Gilben, W. W. Collin, and J. P. Pryor.

Attacks on Japanese

Most Grovians are very much in favor of the miniscule communities of Japanese people living in this area. Indeed, the "Japanese tea garden" doing business near Lovers Point is an example of the fine services provided by these erstwhile people who mostly keep to themselves.

However, a self-appointed posse of people living near San Francisco are protesting the planned admission of more Japanese into the United States. "These immigrants, called the Yellow Plague, are said to be subject to the whims and orders of powerful Japanese bosses. Many are Ninja warriors in disguise. Their eventual goal is alleged to be 'orientalization' of all California. It is also said that the Japanese are driving up wages by creating a scarcity of labor. No white worker will labor alongside the Asians."

When challenged to speak out, Grovians are encouraged to support our Japanese communities. **

Notes from around the area...

- The Mayflower Congregational Church has taken temporary quarters in the Work Building. Special Thanksgiving services will be offered. All are welcome.
- Kohler & Chase, San Francisco, has agreed to provide a Weber Grand Piano for use at this summer's Chautauqua Institute sessions.
- Cowboy justice may have been swift, but it was not always sure. Nonetheless, cowboy justice played a role in preserving the peace of the old West and has furnished material for many thrilling readings. Now cowboy justice is the subject of an entire reel of films being shown at D's Theater. Come early to claim the best seats.

Author's Notes

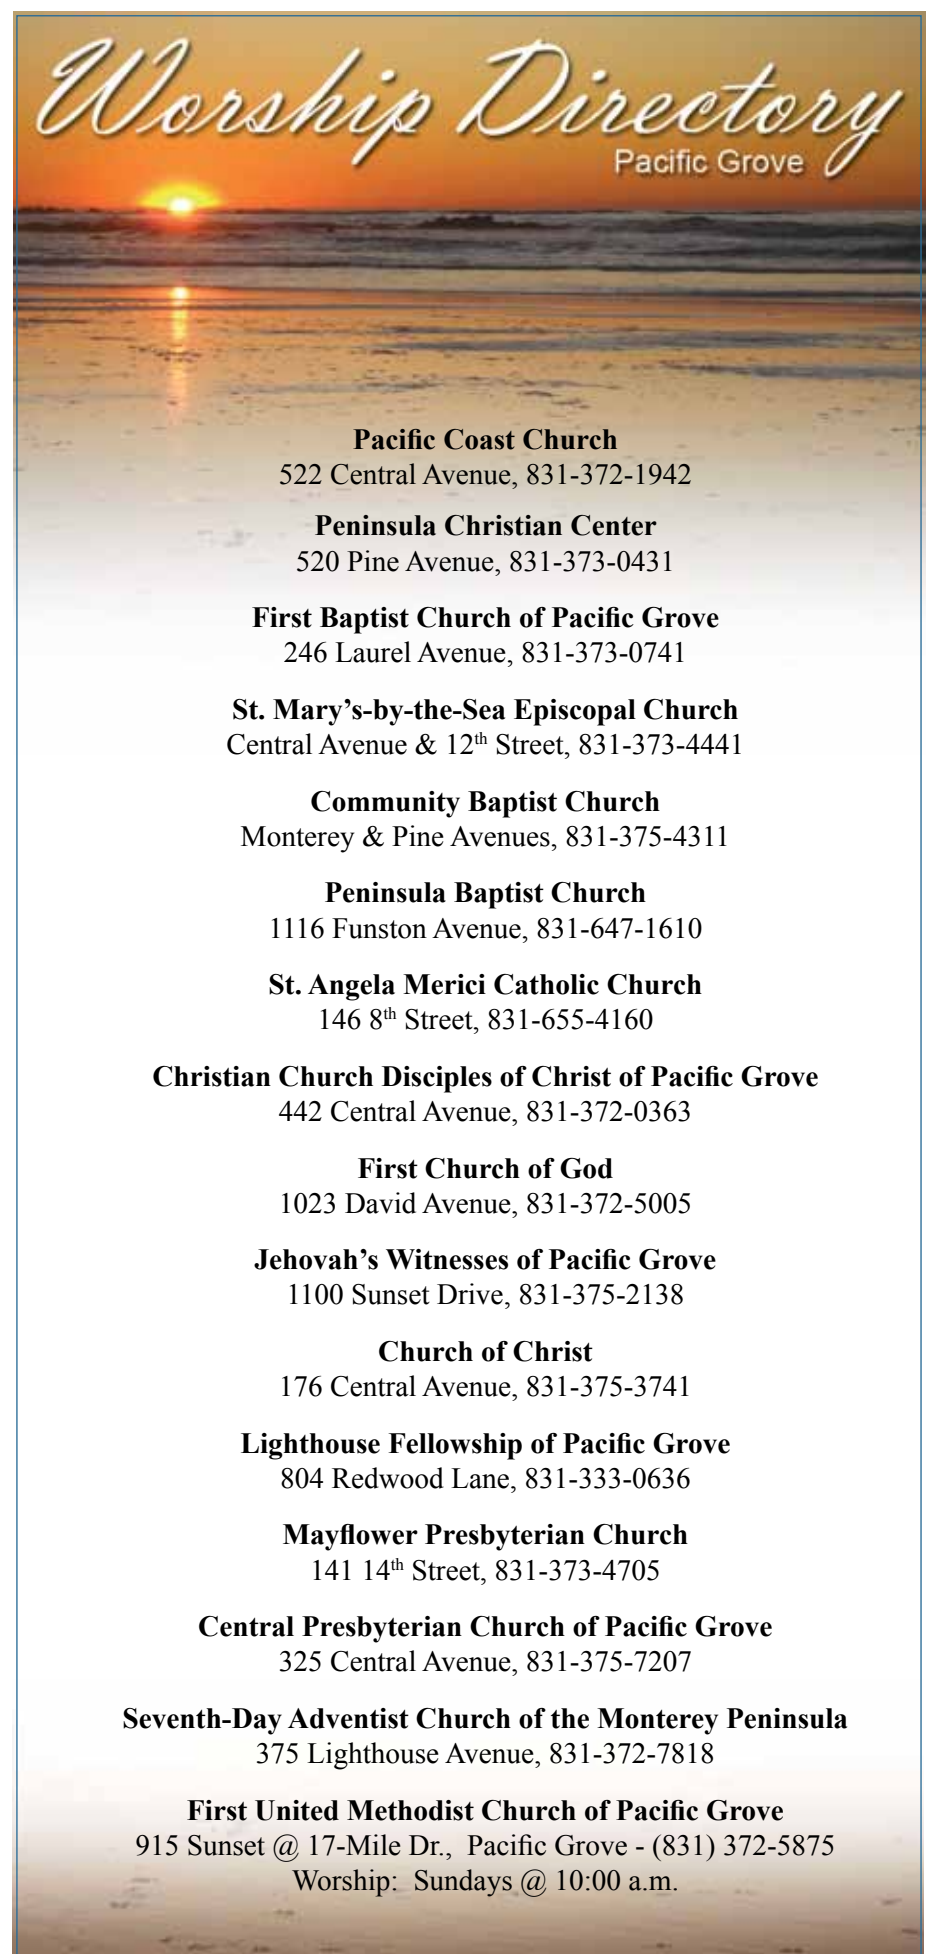

- * On October 19, 1911, while flying at an exhibition in Macone, Georgia, Ely crashed. The aviator was able to walk away from the wreckage, but his neck was broken. He died a short time later at 32 years of age. In 1933, Ely was awarded the Distinguished Flying Cross posthumously by President Franklin D. Roosevelt as recognition of a remarkable contribution to naval aviation.

 Three years earlier, the U.S.-Japanese governments reached a secret understanding in which Japan agreed not to issue passports to emigrants to the United States, except to certain categories of business and professional people. In exchange, President Theodore Roosevelt agreed to rescind an order by which Japanese school children were segregated from white students.

 The bathhouse was then open as a bath house, not as a restaurant

* The "Pastor's room" was a room within homes kept inordinately clean and unused in case there would be an unexpected, sit-down visit by someone such as the pastor.

May Your Days Be Merry and Bright – White Christmas at the Lighthouse Cinema

This year's Pacific Grove Holiday Parade of Lights will be on Thursday December 2 at 6pm. What better way to follow this wonderful home town tradition than to catch Bing Crosby in White Christmas at the Lighthouse Cinema at 7:30? It is a feel-good, heartwarming holiday musical for all ages, up on the big screen in VistaVision and Technicolor. The biggest hit of the year in 1954, White Christmas combines romance, backstage musical and the nostalgia for wartime camaraderie, with Irving Berlin's songs: It's an easy movie to love.

Bing Crosby and Danny Kaye star as war buddies turned hard working show-biz partners who find themselves pursuing a pair of singing sisters, played by Rosemary Clooney and Vera Ellen, to Vermont for a well deserved winter holiday. Irving Berlin's classic songs are performed throughout, including "Sisters", "Count Your Blessings Instead of Sheep" "Blue Skies" "Mandy" and of course White Christmas. First performed on a Christmas Day radio broadcast in 1941, the song became popular immediately with servicemen missing their families and those families back home. Crosby sang it the black-and-white 1942 Holiday Inn and it has been a perennial chart topper ever since. He was the biggest star in Hollywood, so it was inevitable that a Technicolor, widescreen vehicle built around his version of the song would be made, and would be hugely successful.

Mary Albert

Going to the Movies

In 1954 nobody had heard of global warming, so imagine their surprise as Der Bingle and his pals step off the train in Vermont expecting snow and find nothing but balmy weather. "They must have grass-covered igloos up here. This is warmer than Florida!" "Where's the beach? We should have brought our bathing suits" "Is this Vermont, New England's winter playground? Oh -- this must be southern Vermont!" "Where's the snow?" The station agent tells them, "We haven't had snow since Thanksgiving. It was 68 degrees yesterday." As we now know, the economic impact of global warming is severe. No snow means no customers at the Inn where the singing sisters Rosemary Clooney and Vera Ellen are booked. Why, the inn will have to shut down if enough people don't show for the holidays, and that would be a real shame, since it turns out that the buddies' WWII commanding officer, General Waverly, owns the inn. The incandescent light bulb goes off. Let's put on a show!

They don't have Al Gore to explain the inconvenient truth about the warm weather, but luckily they are a song and dance troop, and in this Vermont, the one that's located in Hollywood, USA, all that is required to fix any problem is the hard work that it takes to put on a show. Hard work, yes: there's the calling New York and persuading the head of the company to move the whole show up to Vermont, there's the building sets and the rehearsing and all that singing and dancing and the falling in love. And then there are the misunderstandings and the separations and the reconciliations. But will it ever snow???

It did snow once at the Crosby Clambake, as the AT&T Pebble Beach Pro-Am was once called, in the days before corporate sponsorship dictated the tedious naming of events. In 1962 the players woke up on the day of the final round to a snow-covered golf course, but, as they say in show business, the show must go on! and the tournament was finished the next day. Bing Crosby was a local hero here on the Peninsula and singing sensation around the world. Come see him in his biggest hit, and you'll understand why. Wednesday and Thursday Dec 1 and 2, at noon and 7:30. And don't forget the Parade of Lights on Thursday! See you there.

Wednesdays and Thursdays at 7:30 at the Lighthouse Cinema.

Check with the theater at 643-1333 or www.srentertainmentgrp.com/lighthouse4.asp to confirm show times.
